

Are we being coddled into dependency

What the government gives, the government can and will take.

As I was walking through the Briargate Promenade, I was woefully reminded of the utterly ill-begotten policies jammed down our proverbial throats. Nearly every store front posted vacancies. As no doubt most you know, this is not at all an isolated case only suffered by our area. It is a plague which has infected all states of this country. The unemployment rate, economic state of our country today is not due to the pandemic, but rather a systemic (government wide - to be clear here) attempt to coddle us into dependency on the government and destroy businesses to the point of folding into government run and owned entities. Think I am exaggerating and far off reality? History is slowly but surely repeating itself. Younger generations would not know, as they are prevented, or too disinterested, from learning what really happened years past in Europe, Cuba, and other once economically healthy countries. For those opting out of working, but rather collecting checks from the government, make sure, you will be accepting of any and all mandates brought onto you by that government.

Kirsten Swenson