

Americanism by Erna Haring

SRW

21 January 2023

January! A new year with all its hopes and dreams for ourselves and our country. Although Republicans didn't do that well in the midterm elections, there is a slight lead in the House of Representatives.

We will be looking to see what these Republicans will do. As Paul Prentice, vice chair of the Republican Strategy Form, wrote in an opinion piece in the Gazette, (quote) "We want a Republican Party that will follow our platform and stand for our constitutional values of pro-life, free market, and private property. We want candidates who will fight for those values. We want Republican leaders who will stand up against the progressive-left transformation of America." (unquote)

There is a lot to stand up against in this administration's destruction of America, according to Victor Hanson, distinguished fellow of the Center for American Greatness:

...Surrendering our prior energy independence.

....Printing trillions of dollars in new currency.

.....Ending America's physical boundaries.

...Destroying the public trust in its elections.

.---Redefining crimes as one rich man's crime, another poor man's necessity.

....Junking the ossified [hardened like a bone] idea of a melting pot and multiracial society united by common American values and ideals.

+++-Rendering the United States just one of many nations abroad.

....Neutering the First Amendment.

--Demonizing half the country as semi-fascists, un-Americans, insurrectionists, and even potential domestic terrorists.

...Never mentioning the origin of the COVID-19 virus.

Maybe the new handful of Republicans in the House can change some of this. Maybe they will stand up against this destruction of America for the US citizens, instead of "go along to get along."

As Paul Prentice states, "We need more fighters, and fewer politicians. We seek a Republican Party that offers our citizens a true alternative to the progressive-left Democrats."

